THEIR FUNERAL.

John Henderson and His Son, Who Were Burned to Death

IN THE TUESDAY MORNING FIRE

Laid to Rest in Greenwood Cemetery Beside Their Wife and Mother—The Accident Theory Finds Credence, Though There are Features that are Receiving the Attention of the Authorities—No Tangible Evidence Yet Brought Out.

The remains of John Henderson and Percy, his son, the two victims of the Tuesday morning fire, were interred yesterday afternoon in Greenwood cemetery, beside the grave of the departed wife and mother. The services were conducted by Rev. L. W. Roberts. The funeral took place from their late residence, Mrs. Farrell's boarding-house, 2910 Chapline street.

A large crowd witnessed the funeral and many members of the Potters' union were present at the interment. The sable hearse and the white hearse together gave an additional touch of sadness of the circumstances surrounding their painful deaths.

Before the funeral, the sidewalk in front of Mrs. Farrell's house was blocked with people, curious to view the remains, and incidentally dwell upon the strange fatality that befell the father and son. The universal opinion predominated that the fire was accidental in its origin. Since the excitement attending the fire has subsided, the theory that the fire was due to the inveterate habits of smoking of father and son gains additional strength.

Opposition to the accidental theory was based on the fact that after the fire two pipes were found on the mantel. Fireman George Butler, of the Eighth ward engine house, states that he picked up one of the pipes on a trunk beside the bed while he was in the room immediately after the fire, and that he placed them on the mantel. Further strengthening the evidence that the Hendersons smoked while in their bed, is the statement of the barber who always shaved Henderson. He says that about two months ago Henderson sent word to him to come to his boarding-house and shave him, as he was sick. The barber went there and found him in bed smoking.

James Brady persists in his opinion that the fire was accidental.

Authorities Investigating.

The ludicrous attitude of a morning paper regarding alleged indifference and inactivity on the part of the authorities in discovering the origin of the Henderson fire, is not justified by the facts. The authorities have held several consultations and if the fire was of incendiary origin—and probably it was not—everything possible will be done to arrest the guilty parties.

Prosecuting Attorney Meyer has in his office a piece of burned carpet taken from the room occupied by Henderson, which is saturated with oil. The authorities look with suspicion on this piece of carpet, for, notwithstanding, it is charred, there was so much oil still in it that it soaked through a pad of paper in Mr. Meyer's office. It is not alleged that anyone is trying to make it appear a queer and unexplained method that the place was set on fire, but it is strange that a piece of charred carpet would still be saturated with oil. The authorities think that if the fire at the Farrell house was of incendiary origin, the man who figured at the late Weisgerber fire had a hand in the late Henderson fire.

There are circumstances, which cannot be related now, that would give a certain man a motive to fire both places. Yesterday afternoon Lieutenant Ingram, of the police force, found an oil can wrapped in a handkerchief, near the Spears axle works, but he does not see the connection with the Farrell-Henderson fire, and like Captain Bennett does not think the place was set on fire.

Statement From Mr. Henderson.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

SIR:—We, the relations of the late John Henderson, feel sorry that there have been so many false reports going around during this sad time, and are sorry to have to deny them, but feel called upon to do so. Mrs. Henderson died of pneumonia, as I was present at her death, and as John Henderson spent a good deal of his life with us, we know the statements of Frank Abinger to be false, and the reason he left Abinger's was because he didn't like boarding at a saloon. SAMUEL HENDERSON, THOMAS FODEN, Wheeling, March 4.
